Secretary to the Provisional Committee,
JAMES GILFILLAN, Esq.

IT is proposed to establish in Shanghai a Limited Banking Company, with the above title, in the belief that there is not only room, but actual necessity, for the additional facilities which such an institution will afford to the large local, coasting, and foreign trade which centres in this port.

The great extension of steam communication both by sea and river, and the creation of telegraphic connections, since the existing Local Bank was founded, have greatly added to the importance of Shanghai, until it has become the great depôt or distributing point for the trade of Northern and Central China; but, while it seems desirable that Shanghai should be the head-quarters of the new Bank, and its direction on the spot where the principal interests are involved, a local Committee will be formed in Hongkong for the promotion of the undertaking there.

The success of other public companies in Shanghai and Hongkong, and the evidence of a large sum of money seeking investment in China, encourage the belief that the proposed Capital for this Bank will be readily subscribed; many influential native merchants have already come forward as active promoters and supporters of the undertaking, and the Committee look for a very valuable constituency from Chinese sources.

The legal constitution of the Bank is engaging the consideration of the Committee, and reference has been made to London and elsewhere for the best legal advice upon the subject; and it is understood that no Shares will be alloted, nor will operations be commenced until the necessary arrangements have been completed, when further information will be laid before intending Shareholders. In the meantime, applications for shares are invited, until the 15th April, 1872, but must be on the prescribed forms, which can be obtained from the Secretary.

By order of the Provisional Committee,
J. GILFILLAN,
Secretary.

HONGKONG, MARCH 8TH, 1872.

As usual, the report upon the Government Schools, which has been drawn up by Mr. STEWART, is a very valuable and interesting document. We find in it evidence of the gradual progress of a movement which at first seemed but little likely to succeed, but which, owing in a great degree to Mr. STEWART's own exertions, has now fully established itself in the Colony. The ten years which it has taken to attain this result seem no doubt a long period; but if the work has progressed slowly it has been built on a solid foundation, and there can now be no question that the Government Schools will continue a permanent institution of the Colony—and certainly one of the most creditable we can have.

The results of educating Chinese in foreign language, and making them acquainted with western arts and science, have hitherto been looked upon as discouraging. A certain number of Chinese, generally of the poorer classes, have been willing to flock to our Schools, and have shown great aptitude in learning; but in the majority of instances it has been discovered that so soon as they have acquired a competent knowledge of what are almost the mere elements in our education, they either give up the study altogether, or devote themselves almost entirely to mastering the literature of their own country. This has been usually attributed to the business-like and money-making instincts which form so noticeable a feature in the Chinese character. They find it advantageous to acquire so much information about foreign matters, because by so doing they are enabled to obtain engagements as clerks or interpreters in foreign firms, and having gone so far, they usually think they know quite enough of foreign matters, and need trouble themselves but little more concerning them. There have of course been noticeable exceptions to this, such, for example, as the well known and much respected Dr. WONG, now practising at Canton, but the above has undoubtedly been the rule; and it must be confessed it is not very encouraging when viewed in reference to the influence which it is hoped may be worked upon the Chinese people by our making them acquainted with a system of education and a development of civilization which we consider with justice to be superior to their own. But those who are disposed to be discouraged at the small effect which is produced on the minds of the Chinese by an acquaintance with foreign matters, and even by being educated in foreign languages and science, overlook for the most part that any noticeable changes in national thought and opinion are in all places of very slow growth. If we cast our eyes backwards in Europe, we can scarcely say when, in any given country or in any given number of countries, the great moral and intellectual reforms which separate our age from times now looked upon as little better than barbarous came into play. For instance, we know that the liberty of the Press, one of the greatest blessings of free countries, resulted in England from the omission to renew a licensing and censorship act; but we can only faintly trace the transition in public opinion which caused this line of action—none the less important or significant because negative—to be adopted. We, as it were, take observations from time to time and find that the ship is surely moving, and we can note the progress we have made during a given period, but cannot measure it while it is going on. And it is thus with the progress of foreign influence in China. If we watch it month by month or year by year, we seem to be standing still; but if we glance over ten years we are struck by the strides which have been made. In no direction can it be more gratifying to us to find such advances than in the direct spread of our system of education among the Chinese. This must of necessity be slow. Foreigners are in an overwhelming minority in China, and even in Hongkong. The influence of the native opinion by which a Chinaman or Chinese youth is surrounded, must work very powerfully upon him, as there are probably no people more susceptible of this species of influence than the Chinese; and if against this we find we are making even a little progress, we have no cause for disappointment. If our system is superior, as we believe it is, it will in the long run work its effect; and we need not distrust it because we do not often see sudden and extraordinary conversions, which would be contrary to anything that can be expected in the natural course of events.

In looking back over his labours for the last ten years, Mr. STEWART may feel a justifiable pride in what he has done. He has overcome a vast amount of ignorant prejudice, and has got so far as to make large numbers of the better informed Chinese feel that at least the foreign Schools will do no harm, and that they will make their children more useful members of society by letting them know something of the ways of Europeans. These Schools are now looked upon as a matter of course; and if even now many are sent to them to learn English chiefly for practical purposes, we may fairly hope that as the number of scholars increases year by year there will be among them not a few who will rise from what in a higher point of view is but a means to an end; and after becoming practically acquainted with a foreign language, will take the trouble to acquire some knowledge of our arts, sciences, and civilization. In this, however, we cannot expect great and rapid progress. We must be content if we see any signs of advancement at all. If we consider how few comparatively there are among Europeans who become deeply conversant either with arts or sciences, we can scarcely wonder that there should be comparatively few to do so among the Chinese, who have far less encouragement to stimulate them to exertion, and far greater obstacles to overcome before their exertions can be productive of any appreciable results.

MEETING OF JUSTICES.

A meeting of the Justices of the Peace was held yesterday afternoon, to consider the granting of licences and the transfer of others to a few applicants. Present: Hon. C. May, presiding; Messrs. Deane, M. S. Tonnochy, and S. J. Gower.

Mr. Christian Kock, late a gambling-house watchman, made application for the licence of the "Army and Navy Tavern," a house which has been closed for some time, but formerly opened by Mr. Brown under the same title. The magistrates considered the applicant a respectable man, and the licence was accordingly granted.

Mr. F. Simons, late proprietor of the Commercial Billiard Rooms, and latterly partner with Mr. Francis, proprietor of the Praya Hotel, applied for the transfer of the licence of the Oriental Hotel from Mr. Baynes to himself. The applicant being a very respectable man, the transfer was granted.

Mr. May remarked that such a house as the Oriental Hotel required a respectable person in it, and he was very glad to find one at last about to take it. He did not see why this house should not be as respectable as any in the Colony.

Mr. W. H. Shannon, late engineer of one of the Canton steamboats, and for some time chief engineer of the steamship Manila, applied to have the licence of the "Stag Hotel" transferred from the present proprietor, Mr. Watson, to himself, the present proprietor being about to go to England.

The magistrates were thoroughly satisfied that applicant was a most respectable person, and one fit to take such an establishment, and made no hesitation to grant the transfer. Transfer was granted accordingly.

This concluded the meeting.

POLICE INTELLIGENCE.

March 7th.

BEFORE THE HON. C. MAY.

ALLEGED LARCENY.

Lang-ah-fook, a boatman unemployed, stated in July last, about the 15th, he was employed on board the steamship Travancore, when on that date she was on a passage from Bombay to this port. The defendant, also a boatman, was likewise in her. About 12 o'clock of that date, at midnight, he discovered that his box had been broken open and fourteen rupees had been extracted. He was informed by a person that the defendant had taken it. He went to defendant and accused him of it, when he then searched him, and found in his girdle fourteen rupees. The defendant then took them back.

Defendant stated that he never stole any money from the complainant; he owed some five rupees to complainant which he paid. Yesterday he met the complainant who accused him of owing some money. Defendant was discharged, and complainant told to mind and not bring up any more of his stupid charges.

BREACHES OF ORDINANCE.

The Acting Registrar-General summoned N. Hosungjee, householder of No. 205 and 207, Queen's Road East, for breach of Section VIII of Ordinance 7 of 1866, not reporting changes in tenancy.

Defendant stated house No. 205 had been empty for six months, and was only occupied on the 4th instant, but with regard to house 207, the tenant went to the Registrar-General's office, but could not see any one. That is, he was wrs told so.

Mr. Osmond stated the house 205 had been occupied long before.

Lee-a-hong said he paid money on the 3rd February, but did not occupy the house till the 4th instant, his master was at Canton, and could not have occupied the house. The things were only removed in on the 4th instant.

Lam-a-som stated he was only occupant of the ground floor of No. 207. The upper part were occupied by an European, he never went to the Registrar-General's office, nor did he tell the landlord he had; he did not consider it necessary that he should, he only occupying a portion of the house.

Ling-som-sew stepped forward, and called himself a rent collector to the defendant, said he went to the Registrar General's office, and asked whether it was necessary to report change of tenancy when a house was partly occupied by Europeans, and he was told no. But two of the Chinese clerks and Mr. Osmond of the Registrar-General's office happening to be in court, disputed this, which put witness all aback, causing him to go on a rambling story, which was checked by the magistrate, who asked him if he was wilfully stupid or virtually stupid, warning him that he had better be aware of what he was doing or saying. Mr. May brought to memory a case in which this witness kept it hanging for a whole week through his stupidity. Mr. May, addressing the defendant Hosingjee, told him that if he employed such stupid people as this witness he must expect to get into trouble. He would discharge him; however, in the case of House 205, but in this case of House 207, he, as landlord, was the man who should have reported the change of tenancy. He would fine him in the sum of $5.

Wong-him-po, occupant of house No. 98, Queen's Road, was also summoned by the Acting Registrar-General for breach of Section VIII. of Ordinance 7 of 1866, and was fined $5.

Same defendant was also summoned for breach of Section VII. of Ordinance 7 of 1866, for not reporting himself as householder. Fined $5.

A VARIETY OF CHARGES.

Philip Davis, the man who absconded from Hongkong to Whampoa, and whom Inspector King went up after, was placed in the dock on about twenty-five charges. Inspector King appeared to charge defendant with acting as Inspector of Brothels in Hongkong, and with acting as Inspector of the protective service in Whampoa. Inspector King stated that on his arrival at Whampoa he saw the defendant come alongside in a boat, for the purpose of going to Canton. He apprehended him, and took him to the British Consul, where the defendant was locked up in the cells of the Consulate. The next morning, before bringing him to Hongkong, he told him the offence specified on the warrant. Inspector Hazlitt appeared also to charge the defendant with stealing from his room a gold Albert chain and other things. The court also was filled with complainants and witnesses against the defendant, but the case was remanded till the 9th instant, at 9 a.m.

SUPREME COURT.

BEFORE THE HON. H. J. BALL.

This case was resumed yesterday.

Mr. Drummond said he would call for certain letters, which he had given the other side notice to produce.

The Acting Attorney-General asked by what law the garnishee was called upon by the plaintiff to produce letters. He fully admitted the power of the court to call for them, and if it did so, he should show cause why they should not be produced at this stage of the case. But he did not know by what right the plaintiff called for them. They first objected to his appearing, and now called upon him to produce these letters.

His Lordship said as the right of the court to call for them was admitted, he would call for them, and hear the Attorney-General upon the point.

Attorney-General said this was an attempt to mix up two parts of the enquiry in one. These letters had nothing whatever to do with the question whether there was a cause of action, or with the question whether it arose in the Colony. They would come in on the question whether the property attached belonged to the defendants, but on that point alone, and therefore this was not proper stage to call for them. In a necessarily arbitrary proceeding of this kind, where debts were attached before judgment, His Lordship should be convinced that there was a cause of action arising in the Colony before going into the other questions.

His Lordship took this view, on the construction of the words "and if so" in the Ordinance.

Mr. Drummond said the present witness, Abdool Rahman, could prove the handwriting of the letters. His contention was that they were written by the firm against whom he was proceeding.

His Lordship said the witness could be recalled for this purpose. He certainly thought the two questions—as to the existence of a cause of action, and as to the fact of its having originated in the Colony—should be settled first.

Mr. Drummond said that at all events he must prove the debt.

The Attorney-General said he would pledge his word there was nothing in the letters which would be evidence of the debt.

His Lordship suggested that when the time for production of the letters arrived, if it ever did arrive, they should have the same effect as if produced now.

Mr. Drummond asked how he was to prove the cause of action, if this evidence was excluded. He said that the letters were evidence of the cause of action.

The Attorney-General was sorry his learned friend had committed himself to that statement. They had nothing to do with the debt. It was a mere fishing case to mix up one point with another. There was a very definite point to be proved now, and this would be only a waste of time, as the letters were very long.

His Lordship asked whether Mr. Drummond would assure him that he could not prove his case without the letters, and that he believed he could do so with them.

Mr. Drummond.—I do, my lord.

His Lordship.—Then I'll call for them. I think that is a fair way of putting it.

The Attorney-General.—Yes, my lord.

Here the letters were produced by the Attorney-General, and handed up to the court, after which they were placed in the hands of plaintiff's attorney.

The examination of Abdool Rahman was then proceeded with. He went into details of the transactions between himself, as agent of F. M. E. & Co., and Leong Akum. He also stated that Leong Akum "proceeded to law" against both H. G. & Co. and F. M. E. & Co. When Leong Akum asked him for payment in Hongkong, he did not mention the sum which was due.

A discussion then arose with reference to the receiving of evidence as to an admission made by Moosa. The court ruled that there must be first proved some connection between Moosa and the defendants. On this point Rahman was further examined, and stated that Moosa was acting in Canton for both firms, and after some further argument, His Lordship admitted the evidence as a fact, reserving the consideration of its value, Moosa not having been hitherto proved to his satisfaction an agent to bind the defendants. Several conversations with Moosa in gaol were then gone into, the principal fact being that Moosa said he had received 16 chests Malwa opium per Travancore, shipped by F. M. E. & Co., and that the proceeds would be available to pay the Chinese. This evidence was not concluded when the court adjourned, on account of the sudden indisposition of the learned judge, who has thus been unfortunate enough to be interrupted on two consecutive days in the same manner.

JUDGMENT.

The right of set-off in bankruptcy depends in this Colony upon Section 125 of "The Bankruptcy Ordinance 1864," which is a transcript of Section 171 of "The Bankrupt Law Consolidation Act, 1849." That Section enacts "Where there has been mutual credit given by the Bankrupt and any other Person, or where there are mutual debts between the Bankrupt and any other Person, the Court shall state the Account between them, and one debt or demand may be set against another, notwithstanding any prior Act of Bankruptcy committed by such Bankrupt, before the credit given to or the debt contracted by him; and what shall appear due on either side on the balance of such account, and no more, shall be claimed or paid on either side respectively; and every debt or demand hereby made proveable against the estate of the Bankrupt, may also be set off in manner aforesaid against such estate, provided the person claiming the benefit of such set-off, had not when such credit was given, notice of an act of Bankruptcy by such Bankrupt committed." Under this section there are, as is observed by the editors of Smith's leading cases, in their notes to Rose v. Hart, two classes of cases in which the right of set-off is expressly given: 1, where there are debts; 2, where there have been mutual credits. They proceed to remark that upon the second of the above two classes, that is to say, where there have been mutual credits, Rose v. Hart is a leading authority, and that it is cited whenever the question occurs does a particular state of dealings amount to a mutual credit between the bankrupt and some person claiming to set off a cross demand against his estate? That is questionably true, but the law as applicable to the facts of this case is so succinctly yet so clearly laid down by Lord Chief-Justice Tindal in the case of Gibson v. Bell, reported in 1 Bingham, N. C. 743, that I prefer resting my judgment on it. His Lordship says, "The principle which the bankrupt laws seem to have had in view from the earliest time to the last provisions made therein, is this, that where two persons have dealt with each other on mutual credit, and one of them becomes bankrupt, the account shall be settled between them, and the balance only payable on either side. That this was the practice of the commissioners of bankruptcy long before any statutory provision on the subject, appears clear from the two earliest decided cases; Anonymous before Lord Chief Justice North, and Chapman v. Derby. The first statute which made any express provision on the subject, was the expired statute 4 and 5 Anne, c. 17. By that statute it was enacted in the eleventh section, that where there hath been mutual credit given between the bankrupt and any debtor, and the accounts are open and unbalanced, it shall be lawful for the commissioners or assignees to adjust the account, and the debtor shall not be compelled to pay more than shall appear to be due on such balance. This provision of the expired statute of Anne is re-enacted in the twenty-eighth section of the 5 G. 2. c. 30, with some variation in the expression, that section enacting that 'the commissioners or assignees shall state the account between them, and one debt may be set against another, and what shall happen to be due on either side on the balance of such account, and on setting such debts against one another, and no more, shall be claimed or paid on either side respectively.' This statute continued in force until the 46 G. 3, c. 135, s. 3, which provides, that where there hath been mutual credit given, or mutual debts between the bankrupt and any other person, 'one debt or demand may be set against the other, notwithstanding any secret act of bankruptcy before committed.' The same language is continued in the last statute, 6 G. 4; so that from the earliest practice to the latest provision by statute, the object seems to have been that the account should be stated as between merchant and merchant, and that whatever would be in ordinary practice a pecuniary item in such account, should be the subject of set-off." Now adopting the principle here laid down, and upon a review of all the authorities bearing upon the question, including the case of Nowrojee v. the Chartered Bank of India, which perhaps more nearly resembles the principal case than any cited during the argument, I am of opinion that there was such a "mutual credit" within the meaning of the Ordinance between the bankrupts and the defendants, as to entitle the latter to retain the sums of money received by them since the 22nd day of December, 1861, in respect of the shares specified in the bill, and that they are not bound to pay such sums over to the Assignee regardless of the state of the account. Before concluding this portion of the judgment, I wish to say a word with respect to a case much pressed upon me in the course of the argument. I mean the case of Young v. the Bank of Bengal. That being a decision of the Privy Council, I should have considered myself bound by it, even were it not reconcilable with other cases, but in truth that case when examined contravenes no other authority except that which it expressly overruled, Olivo v. Smith. It is simply distinguishable in one main feature from the present, and all others in part materia, which is that there the bank gave credit to the bankrupt for the notes they had discounted for him, but there was no corresponding credit given by the bankrupt to them. The credit was all on one side, a fact which, when once admitted or ascertained, precludes the possibility of successfully contending; I had almost said of contending that the case could be brought within the purview of an enactment, the object of which is to settle the account between merchants who have had mutual dealings, each giving credit to the other, each relying on the other's solvency. One other matter forms the subject of complaint in this bill, a claim in respect of the proceeds of two iron barges, but that claim was abandoned by the Attorney-General at the hearing; and as my decision on the whole case is in favor of the defendants, I am relieved from the necessity of considering how that abandonment affects the question of costs. They will be payable to the defendants' out of the estate.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "DAILY PRESS."

SIR,—Having failed in his grand coup, with his main force, against the intelligence of the heads of our mercantile firms, "Rad" now makes a flank movement against the Special Jurors.

After quoting in support of his allegation what Judge Adams remarked to a Special Juror, "Rad" now comes forward and shows himself the hollowness of his basis from which he opened fire. If the special jurors are selected "by favouritism" then Judge Adams' remark was not worth a straw. Perhaps the Special Juror whom his Lordship addressed was an upstart, who, without the qualification on the score of intelligence or position, "employed a solicitor who ear-wigged one of his friends." What becomes, then, of the incident on which "Rad" put so much stress, and which he so prominently brought forward as a crushing authority of his first growl against what he has construed to be "toadyism?"

Who will venture to deny that "Rad" is actuated by disinterested motives in showing up toadyism? As a resident from Judge Adams' time he has remained mouth-bound respecting the modus operandi adopted in the formation of the Special Jury List till yesterday, when a "change over the spirit of his dream" seems to have come upon him, and he sees toadyism right and left, forgetting that his long silence on the Special Jury List question is susceptible of being construed into his having played the part of a toadish.

I am, yours faithfully,

QUILL.

THE HONGKONG GOVERNMENT SCHOOLS.

We subjoin Mr. Stewart's Report on the Government Schools, which is of special interest, as giving a resumé of their history from their commencement:—

HONGKONG, 15th February, 1872.

SIR,—I have the honour to forward to you the Blue Book Returns for the year 1871, together with the Annual Report on the Government Schools for the same period.

2.—Although two new schools were opened in the course of the year, the total number under instruction was less than in 1870. There were then 1,302 scholars, as against 1,292 for last year. With one or two exceptions, the attendance at all the schools was less; and this coupled with the fact that the school at Shek Shân, which had a large attendance in 1870, was discontinued in the beginning of 1871, will account for the diminution, amounting in the gross to ten, in the numbers for the year.

3.—Not only was the number enrolled for the year less, but the regularity in the attendance at most of the schools was considerably interfered with, especially towards the end of the year.

4.—As this was owing to circumstances connected entirely with the Village Schools, both those supported and those aided, the causes will be fully considered in that part of the Report which refers to them.

5.—The Central School continues to advance steadily in point of numbers. The number present during the year was 367, as compared with 337 in 1870. The average monthly enrolment was 249, as against 237 in the previous year; and the average regular attendance for 1870 and 1871 stands as 225 and 224 respectively. The highest and lowest monthly enrolments were 265 and 232, as compared with 248 and 208 in 1870.

6.—It is evident from these numbers that causes which tend to interfere with the Village Schools in no way affect the Central School, which has not only held its own, but has advanced steadily, in spite of periodical commercial depressions, and other exceptional causes.

7.—On the 10th of next month the school will have had a history of ten years. Although it would be wrong to measure its progress by decades and not by years, I cannot help reverting to the state of things on the opening day the 10th of March, 1862.

8.—Having arrived in the Colony but a few days previously, I had no knowledge of Chinese. I found congregated in the two Chinese class-rooms a crowd of nearly 300 boys, about one half of whom were scholars under the three Chinese masters, whose schools had previously been in various streets in the Upper and Central Bazaars. The rest were either candidates for the English classes, or stray-comers for the gratification of curiosity.

9.—The normal state of a Chinese school is that the lessons are shouted at the pitch of the voice. My entrance was the signal for a startling display of this diligence. Unaccustomed to such a deafening din, my first feeling was surprise, and my second anger. I shouted "Silence!" This was tacitly interpreted to mean "Read louder!" Another attempt at order meeting with a fresh accession of noise, I retreated, almost in despair, to one of the lower class-rooms, where I had interviews with my young friends in more manageable detachments.

10.—In the course of a day or two, 141 had been arranged in three classes for the learning of English. Of these 55 had some previous knowledge of the language, and 86 had to begin with the alphabet. The remaining 117 read Chinese only. An attempt was made for about six weeks to teach the English classes, with the help of two Chinese assistants, who, at that time, should have bern in rather than over a class. The attempt proved abortive, and an appeal to the Board of Education had the effect of reducing the numbers to 94. Excessive as even this number was for a commencement, it was desirable, for many reasons, that it should be maintained. Only one reading book, a very elementary one, could be found in the Colony, and this had to be used in all the classes till school materials could be obtained from England, about seven months after.

11.—The wonderful docility of the Chinese soon led to the production of order out of what, at first, seemed but a hopeless chaos; and, from that year to the present, beneficial changes and steady progress have been made. A second English master was added in 1864, and a third in 1869. We are now ready for a fourth. In 1862, from want of school materials, from the inexperience of the teachers, and from other patent causes, the instruction was of the most elementary character. Reading, Writing, and Arithmetic was all that could be attempted. As an indication of the state of things now, the papers set to the boys in the highest class, at the last examination, have been appended to this report. These papers were not prepared with any view to publication, but simply as the usual test of proficiency in the year's work. A glance at them will show more of the progress that has been made than any amount of explanation which could well be given.

12.—The standard which must be reached before a boy is considered to have passed, and to be, therefore, eligible for promotion, is one-third of the total number of marks assigned to the various subjects taught in the class. Judged by this standard, the following is the percentage of those who passed, in the various English classes, on the work of last year:—

First (highest) class	60 per cent.
Second "	82 "
Third "	72 "
Fourth "	47 "
Fifth "	57 "
Sixth "	53 "
Preparatory "	80 "

13.—Although little else could have been expected, it was very disappointing to find so low a percentage in the highest class, especially when it stood at 87 per cent in the previous year. The class was very unfortunate in some respects. No fewer than 29 out of the 36 boys which it contains got situations, and left at various periods during the course of the year; and their places had to be filled as they became vacant by promotions from the junior classes. In addition to this, nine, or one-fourth of the whole class, were absent from the examinations, some for their marriages, and others on account of sickness. With two exceptions, these nine absentees would have held respectable places in the class list, had they been able to be present. In the previous year only one was absent, and the class, as a whole, was much more permanent during the year.

14.—Looked at in this light, the school has a great practical difficulty to contend with. If the classes could by any means be made permanent for a year, or even for half a year, there would be no difficulty in passing a very high percentage of the boys; but, when it is considered that no fewer than 134 left school in the course of the year, it will be evident that, if promotions were not made as vacancies occurred, the school would be always half empty by examination-time. Not only is this so, but when promotions have to be made during the three last months of the year, those so promoted, while they would have been the first if they had remained in the lower class, are almost sure to fail in the higher one; and this is particularly the case in promotions from the second to the first, where the range of subjects is so much more extensive than it can possibly be in any of the junior classes.

15.—Looked at in the light of the situations which are obtained and the promotions which are made,—both high prizes in themselves, the result to the scholars is a fortunate one, but it is otherwise to the masters when they come to reckon up the tale, and render an account of the year's work.

16.—Another English master is very much required, not merely for extending the school as to numbers, but for removing, to a great extent, the difficulty alluded to. With his assistance, there can be no doubt that the transition from one class to another would be rendered less abrupt, and the result of the final examinations made more satisfactory. Every effort is made to do this at present, but, with the limited means at our disposal, only partial results can be obtained.

17.—It is quite certain that, with another master and additional accommodation, another hundred could be added to the attendance, and the sphere of the school's usefulness thereby enlarged. The school has firmly established itself as one of the permanent institutions of the Colony; and the Chinese, both here and in the adjoining province, regard it with increasing confidence. They now seem to understand its aim and purpose. They do not find it an attempt to exercise some sinister influence, either religious or political, or both, as was at first more than half suspected. In other parts of China too, and also in Japan, the school is beginning to attract some attention; and, if nothing untoward happens, there is good reason to believe that, before long, the latter country will be more numerously represented at the school than it is at present.

18.—Nearly all the nationalities in the Colony have now their representatives in the school, whose doors, it cannot be too well known, are open to all without regard to creed or colour. It is rather surprising still to find, in quarters where one would expect more correct information, grave doubts as to the position which the school holds with regard to religion. There are some who think that we attempt to proselytize. There are others who think that we have a nervous dread of a clergyman entering the place. Both parties could not possibly be more mistaken; but it seems to be the fate of secular education to be distorted and misrepresented. It will not be so always. Ten years will see the superstition exploded; and I hope I shall never again have the humiliation of asserting our honesty in this particular. It is surely too late in the day to assert, on the one hand, that education, whatever protestations are made to the contrary, must be irreligious. Such language is as applicable to the exchange or the counting house as it is to school or college. Science and Language are as distant from dogma as are the details of the merest truisms; but theirs is the fault who render the repetition of them a necessity.

19.—Of the 134 boys who left during the year, 59 are known to have obtained lucrative employment; 19 left the Colony and returned to their native places; 33 did not return after the New Year and Midsummer holidays, and probably did not return to the Colony; 17 had their names removed from the roll, principally for irregularity, but in one or two cases for disobedience; 11 went to Chinese schools; 5 left on account of sickness; and 1 died. Of those who have obtained employment, 33 are known to be in Hongkong, Canton and adjacent places; 2 in Swatow; 1 in Foochow; 7 in Shanghai; 3 in Japan; 1 in San Francisco; 1 in Annam; 1 in Singapore; and 1 in Bombay.

20.—The number of those who left during the year was greater by 39 than in 1870. This points to the difficulty already alluded to, against which the school has to contend. Many boys seem to come without any definite idea of what they intend doing. Many parents, too, who, at first, think nothing of the payment of the small fee, in the course of a month or two begin to grudge it, and withdraw their boys, frequently themselves also withdrawing from the Colony. By far the greatest number of those who leave before getting employment is accounted for by the shifting character of the population. In addition to all these causes, there is this other one, that many of the Chinese think that the acquirement of English, or of any other barbarian language, is an affair not of years but of months. When they find their mistake, instead of trying to mend it, they cut the knot of the difficulty, and give themselves no further trouble about a matter of so small importance.

21.—The problem which the school is working out for itself is whether it is to be one of elementary instruction for the many, or of higher instruction for the few; that is, whether it is ultimately to be for the education of 900 or of 300, for a smaller number than the latter cannot be contemplated. It would be premature, at present, to attempt to solve the problem, and it might be disastrous to adopt, at once, either course, without waiting for, and taking advantage of, the current of events.

22.—The only new subject introduced in 1871 was Mathematical Drawing. Not much progress had been made, as the necessary materials did not arrive from England till late in the year. The Music class still progresses, and the Chemistry class has been highly successful. To the Drawing and Music only one hour a week can be devoted; and this, taken in connection with the constant changes in the classes, prevents great or rapid progress. To the Chemistry class more time is devoted, and there is a corresponding result. The weekly exercises connected with this subject, and the papers written at the last examination by the boys who had been in the class for the whole year, showed very clearly what could be done if the classes were more permanent.

23.—Before another Report is written, I hope to see an entirely new building in the course of construction. No more progress can be made without increased accommodation, and that cannot well be obtained without a new school, built on recognized principles, and, therefore, specially adapted for school purposes, which a great part of the present building never was, and never can be. The expense may be a serious consideration, but if the school is worth retaining, and it has established its title to that, the money required should not be grudged, especially at a time when there are funds available which are not likely to be available long. As, however, this subject is receiving the consideration of the Government, it need not be further discussed here.

24.—The school fees amounted during the year to $1,763.75, of which $1,511.25 went into the Treasury, and $252.50 to the salary of the teacher of the Preparatory class.

25.—Nothing now remains but to express the thanks of all connected with the school to our Prize-givers. These were His Excellency the Governor, His Excellency the Lieutenant-Governor, the Honourable Chief-Justice Smale, the Honourable C. C. Smith, Dr. Dods, Mr. Kwok Cheung, Mr. Mooraom, Mr. Russell, Mr. Saint, and Mr. Wai Kwong, by whose donations, in addition to the sum on the year's Estimates, prizes to the value of upwards of $300 were awarded at the recent examination.

26.—As previously stated, 1871 did not prove a very favourable year to the Village Schools. The number under instruction for the year was less by 40 than in 1870; and this, although there were two additional schools. The attendance, too, became very irregular towards the end of the year; more so than it had been for the previous year. This was attributable to two causes, the high price of rice and the dullness of trade. In all the villages, the same answer was given, when enquiries were made as to the causes of the decrease and the irregular attendance. Whenever it was possible for a child to earn a few cash by grass cutting, firewood gathering, or cake selling, he was taken away from school. In the most favourable years the poverty in our villages is something of which few can have any idea, but in a year, such as the last, when the staff of life is dear, it must be something very serious.

2.—Sai-ying Pún (Pun-ti.)
3.—Girls' School.
4.—Bowrington.
5.—Sai-ying Pún (Hak-ka.)
6.—Tang-lung Chau (Pun-ti.)
7.—Webster's Crescent.
8.—Aberdeen.
9.—Tai Wong Kung.
10.—West End.
11.—Wong-nai Ch'ung.
12.—Shâu-ki Wan.
13.—Tang-lung Chau (Hak-ka.)

28.—Among these schools Stanley continues to hold the pre-eminence. If all the Village Schools were as it is, there would be much cause for congratulation. The master is a good scholar, a diligent and successful teacher, and he enjoys in a high degree the confidence of the villagers. The school-room is always neat and clean. The scholars are regular in their attendance and orderly in their behaviour. A new school-house is much wanted here. The locality of the present one is unhealthy; and to this must be attributed one or two serious attacks of illness from which the master suffered last year. The whole village is said to be unhealthy, and the death-rate high, especially at some seasons of the year. A new school-house on one of the knolls adjacent to the village should, if well drained and properly ventilated, be much more healthy than the present one.

29.—The new school at Tai Wong Kung in Wan-tsai has been very successful; but, from the fact of its being new, it is too soon to speak confidently about it. It has withdrawn a few of the scholars from Bowrington and a great many from the Hak-ka school at Tang-lung Chau. The wanderers will no doubt find their way back to their old schools by and by; and, if they do not, no harm is done, as long as they are taught at all. If the children could but be got to attend any school, the particular school of their choice would be a matter of very minor importance.

30.—The Village Schools receiving grants-in-aid are 11 in number. Their relative efficiency stands thus:—1, Ap-li Chau; 2, T'o-kwa Wan, (Hak-ka.); 3, Yau-ma Ti; 4, Ma-t'au Ts'un; 5, Ma-t'au Ch'ung; 6, Little Hongkong; 7, T'o-kwa Wan, (Hok-lo.); 8, Hok Un; 9, Mong Kok; 10, Hung Hom; 11, Pok-fu Lam.

31.—The school at Pok-fu Lam was added in the course of the year, and the grant was withdrawn from Shek Shan, where the people refused to change the master, although he stood convicted of repeated instances of neglect and disobedience. He is a very cunning old man, and holds some mysterious sway, I suspect of a fortune-telling nature, over the ignorant villagers.

32.—A grant was applied for to the school at Tai-kok Tsui, where the new Dock is to be, but the master, on examination, was found to be quite unfit for his duties. The villagers were requested to select another, but they declined. If they could not have the grant with the present master, they would take him without it. They have since thought better of it, and the school is likely to receive the grant this year.

33.—The villagers of Little Hongkong have again been distinguishing themselves in their own peculiar way. In 1870, they tried to make the master out a thief, in order that the Ti-po's son, an ignorant youngster, might be installed as his successor. Last year, they brought a charge of a most disgraceful nature against the present master, no doubt with the same object. The matter was fully investigated at the Police Court and the lying witnesses fined. I wish it had been in the power of the Magistrate to add a flogging as well. The charge was utterly baseless; and what the state of morality in the village is, may be judged from the fact that the people, knowing well that it was baseless, yet incited five little boys to stick to a story which one of them had concocted in revenge for a sound flogging which the master had given him for fighting. It was very melancholy to listen to the tissue of falsehoods and contradictions of which the boys were guilty in the witness-box. Our mode of inflicting punishment fails sadly to meet such cases. A heavy fine on the whole village and the imprisonment of the Ti-po, however foreign to what is called Constitutional Government, would have been a punishment salutary for the present, and deterrent for the future. The villagers are simply children in civilization; and punishment, after English ideas, is to them little or no punishment at all. There is neither conscience nor a healthy public opinion to appeal to, and where these are wanting ordinary punishments fall very lightly.

34.—The boys, with one exception, deserted the school, and the parents asked for the removal of the master. It was useless to ask them why this should be done, after his innocence had been clearly established. They had suffered a defeat in one quarter, and they thought to make up for it in another. For two months they held out; and then the more sensible of them, seeing that the determination to maintain the master in his place, scholars or no scholars, was not going to be departed from, began to think of sending their children back. The Tipo excited himself strenuously to prevent this; but, when he was told that if the boys were not all back in school by a certain day he would have to answer for his conduct before a Magistrate, he discontinued his opposition and the boys all returned.

35.—So much for what has been done. Table VI points to a large field still uncultivated. The number of children in the Colony who get no education is roughly estimated at 11,000. What can be done for these it is very hard to say. If schools were already built to accommodate the whole of them, a very small percentage would attend them. Disinclination is one great drawback; poverty is perhaps a greater. Compulsory education would uproot the evil; but is compulsory education possible here? I confess myself unable to give an answer. One thing is quite certain, that if these eleven thousand children were compelled to go to school, food and clothing would have to be supplied to them. In many cases, lodging would have to be provided for them also. A large proportion of the children live in boats, which are here to-day and somewhere else to-morrow. About one half of them, too, are girls, for whom education is considered not a superfluity merely, but a mistake.

36.—The first question, therefore, which calls for an answer is not—Shall we have compulsory education? but—How are these two enemies of education, poverty and prejudice, to be overcome? When that has been satisfactorily answered, the rest is easy; but, until that has been so answered, it is hopeless to attempt to educate. That our criminal classes are largely recruited from the ranks of the ignorant and idle is beyond a doubt. The boat boys on the Praya commence their career with picking rice bags, follow that up with picking pockets, and end their days as pirates. The desirability of education is but too evident; but how it is to be accomplished is a difficulty which still remains.—I have the honour to be, Sir,

Your most obedient Servant,

FREDERICK STEWART,

Inspector of Government Schools.

The Honourable J. GARDINER AUSTIN,
Colonial Secretary, &c.

(Daily News.)

SATURDAY, Jan. 13th.

The new chapel and schools erected in Skinner-street, Bishopsgate, were yesterday opened by the Bishop of London, who was supported by the Lord Mayor, Mr. Sheriff Bennett, Mr. Alderman Lawrence, M.P., Mr. Alderman Owden, Baron A. de Rothschild, and others.

Yesterday the preservation of the unappropriated land adjoining Victoria-park was again the subject of discussion at the Metropolitan Board of Works, and it was resolved that a deputation should wait upon the Chancellor of the Exchequer to ascertain if the Government would be willing to include the land in question within the area of the park, in order that it might be preserved for ever, for the recreation and enjoyment of the public.

Yesterday the witnesses called before the Megæra Commission were Henry Boryer, carpenter of the ship from December, 1867, to August, 1870; Mr. W. Mitchell, assistant shipwright at Sheerness; Mr. W. Luard, captain-superintendent at the same dockyard; and Admiral the Hon. Charles Eliot, commander-in-chief of the Sheerness Station. The latter stated that, before the Megæra sailed on her last voyage, he satisfied himself that the cargo she took was a proper cargo. He knew that from the beginning she was supposed to be a very uncomfortable ship, but he believed her to be a good sea boat, and he had no reason to suppose she was unseaworthy. He had nothing to do with the selection of the Megæra to go to Australia.

Vice-Chancellor Malins yesterday made an order for a compulsory winding-up of the European Assurance Society. This order, his Honour said, would not prevent the transfer of the business to any other company, nor the making of any arrangement for the benefit of policy-holders.

In the Court of Vice-Chancellor Bacon yesterday, the point was raised whether the Great Eastern Railway Company, under their special Acts of Parliament, were empowered to stop up the thoroughfare of Sun-street, Bishopsgate. His Honour decided in the negative, and granted an injunction restraining the company from blocking up the street in question.

The bankruptcy of the claimant to the Tichborne baronetcy again came before Mr. Registrar Hazlitt yesterday. In consequence, however, of the protracted proceedings in the Court of Common Pleas, another adjournment took place, and the case will next be heard of on the 12th of April.

In the French Assembly, on Tuesday, an ultra-Republican member, M. Brunet, made a strange speech, in which he attributed all the sufferings of France to her irreligion, and moved that a temple should be erected on the Place du Roi de Rome. Only two members supported his proposal.

At the great meeting of French manufacturers, held in Paris on Wednesday, to protest against the tax on raw material, it was stated that twenty-five of the French Chambers of Commerce were in favour of free trade; that seventeen supported the Commercial Treaty with England; that four were indifferent, and only seven advocated the abrogation of the treaty. M. Wolowski, who spoke in favour of the income tax, was much applauded.

It is announced from Versailles that the Committee appointed to examine the decrees confiscating the Orleans' property is unanimously in favour of abrogating them.

It seems that the French prelates have joined together in a sort of crusade against the Bill on primary instruction brought forward by M. Jules Simon. The Bishop of Beauvais has addressed a letter to the French Assembly, in which he declares that the want of education is by no means such a formidable danger to France as is generally supposed. He concludes his letter by urging that the instruction of the people should be exclusively confided to the Church.

(Standard.)

The Special Committee on Gun-cotton, appointed by the War Office after the Stowmarket catastrophe, have issued their preliminary report. Upon the evidence taken they have come to the conclusion that there is no reason why the Government should relinquish the manufacture of compressed gun-cotton.

The Trades Union Congress sat again yesterday at Nottingham. The subjects discussed were—"Conciliation and Arbitration," "Further Reduction of Hours of Labour," and "Direct Representation of Labour in Parliament." A rather curious episode took place. The Chairman complained of the manner in which the delegates neglected their duty. The roll was thereupon called over, and it was found that there were 23 absentees!

The inquest on a lunatic soldier who was killed by another lunatic at an asylum at Bow, was resumed yesterday. From the evidence of one of the inmates it appeared that a party of patients were at work in the grounds, when Henry Salzman gave the deceased, John Dickens, a blow on the skull with a spade, which felled him. No other blow was struck. Dickens lingered a few days, and then died from the effects of the blow. There was no quarrel, and no provocation had been given by the deceased. The Jury, under the direction of the Coroner, returned a verdict of Manslaughter against Salzman.

The juveniles of the metropolis will regret to learn that the baby hippopotamus, which was born a few days ago, died yesterday of inanition. The parent animal exhibited such ferocity of temper that it was found impossible for the officers of the Zoological Gardens to enter the enclosure to feed the little one.

MONDAY, January 15th.

A consultation between Sir W. Jenner, Dr. Gull, and Dr. Lowe has resulted in the issue of a bulletin bearing their signatures, and dated yesterday, in which it is stated that the Prince of Wales continues to make satisfactory progress, and is daily gaining health. It is added that some time must yet elapse before the strength is fully established. There will now be no further bulletins. The first of this series of documents appeared on November 23.

Lord Carnarvon is going on favourably, and he is now considered by his medical attendants to be quite out of danger.

There was a soirée at Bristol on Saturday evening to celebrate the adoption of the nine hours system in that city. Mr. Morley, M.P., expressed his opinion that employers would lose little, if anything, by a reduction in the hours of labour, because the men would work with the conviction that they had been fairly treated. They would do as much work, and perform it better than men compelled to labour ten hours under a sense of injustice. Mr. Hodgson, M.P., in the course of his observations, spoke of the recent conviction of a workman at Hammersmith, under the Criminal Law Amendment Act, as a decision calling for review before another tribunal.

On Saturday, the Metropolitan Board of Works took formal possession of Hampstead Heath, and in a short and simple ceremonial, dedicated the same for ever to the use of the public.

The Trades' Congress, before closing its sittings, appointed a committee to take any action, which may be necessary to secure the repeal of the penal clauses of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, and to watch over the interests of labour generally in Parliament. Next year's Congress will be held at Leeds.

A case bearing upon the law of nuptial settlement was on Saturday before Vice-Chancellor Wickens. A woman, who at the time of her marriage had £500 in the bank in her maiden name, drew it out on a cheque of her own two days before her husband's death, and at his request, for the purpose of discharging some minor liabilities. At his decease she ascertained for the first time that her husband was rather deeply in debt, and she was now called upon by the executors to the estate to account for the money as a part of his property. She, however, claimed it as her own, but as there had been no marriage settlement, his honour held that, the money having passed into the husband's possession, the widow must hand it over to his executors.

The bankruptcy of Sir Claude Champion de Crespigny was before Mr. Registrar Spring Rice on Saturday, when the baronet passed his public examination.

A shocking occurrence has taken place at Tottenham. On Saturday afternoon a man named Ward, who was 40 years in the service of the New River Company, was found to have committed suicide, and on searching his cottage his wife was discovered dead in her bed. No marks of violence were upon her body. The impression is that she died suddenly, and that her husband terminated his existence in a fit of despondency.

There is to be a meeting at Versailles on an early day of delegates from the chief commercial cities of France, to protest against the proposed duty on raw material.

being found in the Transvaal, and that the yield of diamonds is increasing.

(Standard.)

The French National Assembly on Saturday commenced the discussion on the proposed taxes on raw material. M. Thiers said that the imposition of these taxes was the only practicable course open to the Government to meet the present financial necessities; but, at the same time, he did not make their adoption a Cabinet question. The debate will be resumed to-day. The commercial and manufacturing interests are strongly opposed to these taxes, and delegates from the principal commercial cities will assemble shortly at Versailles to protest against them. The Committee on the Budget have pronounced in favour of a sinking fund to the amount of 200 million francs a year. The proposition of M. Picard, that the provisional state of affairs should now cease, and that the Republic should be definitively declared, has been rejected by the Radicals of the Left as inopportune, and beyond the competence of the Assembly. The Government, it is stated, also regards the proposal as inopportune.

The Duke de Persigny's illness has, as was feared, terminated fatally. The Duke died on Friday evening at Nice.

Amongst the witnesses examined on Saturday by the Megæra Commission, Mr. Reed, formerly Chief Constructor to the Navy, gave evidence. He said that the Megæra was a bad type of vessel from the beginning, and that a great deal of money had been spent upon her. The reduction in the estimate of repairs arose simply from the fact that the Megæra was considered a vessel which should not be sent on a long foreign voyage. Lord Lawrence questioned the witness as to the absence of periodical examinations of ships, and said, that it appeared that the Megæra had not been thoroughly examined for seven years. "It is very strange to me (added his lordship) that nobody connected with the Admiralty or any of the dockyards ever thought that it would be well to subject the vessel to a thorough overhaul." Mr. Reed, in reply, appealed to his long experience, and said that the conclusion he had arrived at was that the people about dockyards were too prone to make thorough overhauls and incur expense. The inquiry was djourned until to-day.

An inquest opened at Guy's Hospital some days ago on the body of a woman named Pettingell, was brought to a conclusion on Saturday. The deceased, according to her dying depositions, had discovered that her husband was living with another woman, and having met him by appointment, they went over London Bridge. On the way, as she stated, he selected a fitting opportunity to push her down under the wheels of a passing vehicle. A brewer's dray went over her and inflicted mortal injuries. The police have failed to arrest the husband, but the Jury returned a verdict of "Wilful Murder" against him.

AWKWARD INTERRUPTION OF A WEDDING FEAST.

A clerk left his wife and family in Edinburgh some weeks ago, ostensibly for the purpose of seeking employment. As weeks passed and no word came from him, his wife—who had three children, the youngest of whom is only a few weeks old, to provide for—naturally felt very anxious about his safety. One Sunday a friend who happened to go to a parish church in town heard among the list of proclamation of marriage the absent clerk's name, and that of a young woman who is employed in a printing establishment in town. Immediate word was conveyed to his wife, who could scarcely credit the tale. On the Monday she made inquiries, from which she learned that it was too true, but did not succeed in discovering his residence. Nothing daunted, she started afresh on Tuesday, accompanied by her three children, and between 8 and 9 o'clock in the evening they landed in his lodgings in Hay-street, and found him and his bride heartily enjoying themselves, having, it is said, been married about an hour before. When confronted with his injured family he admitted the relationship that existed between them. As no policeman could be got, his wife, who is rather a powerful woman, seized him by one arm, while his landlord took the other, and thus marched off with him towards the police-office, leaving his bride at the festive board reflecting on this unexpected blight on her future prospects.—Pall Mall Gazette.

MR. SPURGEON ON LONG SERMONS.

In the course of an address delivered to workmen, Mr. Spurgeon commented on the excuses people made for not going to church. Some persons, said Mr. Spurgeon, complain that they cannot understand the sermons they hear. The reason was that ministers would use big words. He (Mr. Spurgeon) always endeavoured to get rid of all the big words out of his sermons, and was as particular as their wives were to get the stones out of the plum-pudding. They would get in somehow, but the main thing was to preach as simply as possible. Long sermons, also, were a great evil. If a person preached a long sermon, it was because he had nothing to say. It might appear odd, but it was nevertheless a fact, that when people had nothing to say they took a long time about it; but when they had got something worth telling they out with it at once. Therefore he repeated, when a man makes a long sermon he sets out with a very little, and begins to spin, spin, spin. He was of the same opinion as Dr. Chalmers, who was once asked how long it took to make a sermon. "That" he replied, "depended upon how long you wanted it. If your sermon is to be half an hour long it will take you three days. If it is to be three-quarters of an hour, it may take you two days, or perhaps only one; but if you are going to preach for an hour, why, there is not much occasion to think a great deal about it. It may be done an hour."—Telegraph.

A SLIP IN THE PRAYER BOOK.—The Times, in noticing a certain edition of the new Lectionary, says:—"The newly issued Prayer Book of a firm that we could name gives us in the Psalms 'Thou hast broken my bones' for 'Thou hast broken my bonds.'"

A practical joke, played off in New York, has given rise to much scandal. Some young men had inserted in the sandwiches prepared at the luncheon-table on a well-known civic reception of his Imperial Highness Prince Alexis, thin layers of soap to replace the ham which had been previously abstracted. The exquisite enjoyment of the perpetrators of the joke may be imagined when the sandwiches were bitten and the portion tasted, forcibly swallowed for manner's sake by the unfortunate victims.

THE SILVER COINAGE.—It is stated that within a short time the Bank of England was unable to supply a Government Department with £400 in silver coin. The London and Westminster Bank, one of the best customers of the Bank of England, applied there and at the Mint for £500 in silver, and failed. A leading tradesman called upon his banker for £10, and could only obtain £5 in silver. Its scarcity is admitted. Worn silver coin is received and exchanged at the Bank of England and its branches.

DISLOYAL SCENE AT LIMERICK.—The inauguration of the Mayor at Limerick was accompanied by a scene of extraordinary and seditious disorder. On the Mayor referring to the recent illness of the Prince of Wales, he was met with a perfect storm of yells, shouts, and hisses, and when attempting to proceed he was assailed with cries of "Three cheers for the political business." This call was responded to by thunders of applause. Cries of "Home Rule for Erin," and "Down with Gladstone," were then aised, and the council broke up amidst unparalleled confusion.

ENGLISH AND CHINESE DICTIONARY WITH THE PUNTI AND MANDARIN PRONUNCIATION.

FOR comprehensiveness and practical service this Work stands unrivalled. All the new words which the Chinese have of late years been compelled to coin to express the numerous objects in machinery, photography, telegraphy, and in science generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are here given in extenso. Each and every word is fully illustrated and explained, forming exercises for students of a most instructive nature. Both the Court and Punti pronunciations are given, the accents being carefully marked on the best principle hitherto attained. The typography displays the success of an attempt to make the Chinese and English type correspond in the size of body, thereby effecting a vast economy of space, achieving a clearness not previously attained, and dispensing with those vast margins and vacant spaces which have heretofore characterized Chinese publications.

To illustrate the vast scope of the work, the following facts are submitted for consideration. Chalmers' Vocabulary contains about 16,000 Chinese characters, and Medhurst's English and Chinese Dictionary about 100,000, whilst this work contains more than 50,000 English words, and upwards of 600,000 Chinese characters. Again, despite all the grammars and other elementary works as yet published, the student of this difficult language absolutely requires examples to display the various applications and equivalents of different words which have one general meaning. Of these examples this work contains more than five times as many as any other Dictionary hitherto published.

For practical purposes the arrangement of the work is so complete, that a reference to its pages enables a person who understands English to communicate effectively with natives who understand nothing but Chinese. In this respect the work will be found indispensable to all Europeans residing in China, and to the natives themselves it explains subjects fully, with which very few indeed of them are perfectly acquainted. To parties resident in England and interested in China it cannot but be invaluable occasionally.

It comprises upwards of two thousand large quarto pages.

Extracts.

(Daily News.)

This book is creditable to the author. Mr. Shaw records, in a most simple and unaffected style, his daily experiences on a journey across the Himalayas to Kashgar and back again, and during a solitary life of three whole months in the capital of the Atalikh-Ghazi; and the record in question bears evidence of a common sense and good nature marking Mr. Shaw as pre-eminently fitted for such an adventure. His book is not to be treated as one that is merely skimmed and forgotten afterwards. It will stand the test of time, as of course that of the sober study of all persons versed in the intricacies of Central Asian geography and politics, while at the same time it will afford amusement to, and engage the interest of all readers of even three volume novels, who have a general knowledge of the dark regions connected in our early memories with Moore's melodious poetry, and in our later recollections with revolution and massacre.

The only European who had preceded Mr. Shaw on a visit to Kashgar from British India was Adolphe Schlagintweit, who was barbarously murdered there in 1857 by Valli-Khan, a ruffian perpetually drunk on "raki" and "bhang," during the Chinese tenure of the country. That ill-starred traveller's head for a long time graced a hideous pyramid of human skulls at the gates of the city. In 1272 this country had been traversed by Marco Polo, and in 1603 by the Jesuit Goez, and that, too, with comparatively fewer misgivings as to their probable fate at the hands of the great Khans of those days. From the North a Russian officer of Tartar parentage, and a namesake of the murderer of Schlagintweit, had penetrated to Kashgar in 1859 in the disguise of a Kokand merchant. This shrewd and clever adventurer died in Siberia in or about the year 1864, after producing to the world the interesting results of his journey, which have appeared in an English work on Central Asia. But since Valikhanof's prying expedition into Alty-shahr—the country of the Six Cities; or, Djety-shahr, country of the Seven Cities, as it is now styled—the Chinese have all been massacred, and Kashgaria, the name under which that portion of Eastern Turkestan is best known to us, has been a closed book under the seal of Mahommedan fanaticism. In connection, however, with the history of travels in this part of the world, there is a myth which for some little time puzzled even our best geographers. Valikhanof in the account of his travels referred to an itinerary and journal of a German officer in the East India Company's Service, who was supposed to have ferreted in the most marvellous manner throughout all Central Asia in the beginning of this, or towards the close of the last century. Russian geographers made a great stir on the discovery of George Ludvig Von ——'s maps and manuscripts, which would naturally have been of inestimable value had they only been genuine. Curiously enough, however, no traces of such a person's existence could be found in England or in India, and, to the discomfiture of the Russian champions, duplicates of both maps and documents were unearthed in the archives of our Foreign Office, which were found to have been obtained many years ago under circumstances leaving no doubt of their having been fabricated, and most skilfully, from fancy and from data then universally accessable.

To complete the list of those who have actually visited Kashgar, we may mention the name of a Captain Reinthal, a Russian agent, who, with an escort of a few Kazaks, anticipated Mr. Shaw by three months from the Russian side. This officer, all unknown, as we find, to our author, was still in Kashgar when he arrived. Mr. Shaw makes a mistake in saying that this Russian officer returned to Russia together with the Atalikh's Envoy, or a short time before the latter left for St. Petersburg. Shadi-mirza, the Envoy in question, was in Vernoë, in the Russian Province of Turkestan, when Captain Reinthal set out from there for Kashgar, and it does not seem to have been generally known (when the same envoy, after his return to Kashgar from St. Petersburg, proceeded to India) that he was the Atalikh-Ghazi's nephew. There are other circumstances which we might dwell upon to explain the evasion on the part of the Khan of Kashgar in appointing an agent to accompany Mr. Shaw back to Calcutta, but the space to which we are limited will not allow us to enter into this at present.

In the title to his book Mr. Shaw revives the old-fashioned and broad appellation of "High Tartary," meaning, of course, the elevated country of the Tartars. Now this may still be the most popular name for Eastern Turkestan, yet, to our thinking the author shows some inconsistency in making this sacrifice to popular taste and understanding, for in the pages of his book, following close upon the title, which are devoted to a disquisition upon the subject of the component parts of the population of that region, he argues that the dominating race are of Aryan extraction. Even in a physico-geographical sense "High Tartary" may vanish with all the other exploded nomenclature of our great grandfathers; since also, on Mr. Shaw's showing, the Kashgarians are only Tartarised Aryans, he cannot justly call their country Tartary, and we presume that the "High" cannot be taken ethnographically as meaning essentially Tartar.

The history of the rebellion, which transferred this country from the hands of the Chinese, who had held it for upwards of a century, into those of the present ruling Mahomedan race, is nowhere precisely given, and the facts are difficult to explain. Even in the late Lieutenant Hayward's report the story of it is fragmentary and necessarily inaccurate in several particulars. The western part of this region was wrenched from the Chinese in the year 1864 by the native Mohammedan population, aided by the Nomad Kirghizes, after the eastern division (including the towns of Urumtsi, Kucha, Turfan, Aksu, and others) had fallen to the Turzans, or Mohamedanised militia of the Chinese province, and subsequently also to the disaffection and outbreak in Kuldja of the Taranchis, or people of the "bloody sweat." The Chinese were almost completely annihilated, and the ambans, or Chinese commandants, when at their last gasp, almost in every instance blew themselves up in their citadels. But the present ruler of Kashgaria came upon the scene a year later, and although Mr. Shaw says that it was he who finally took the fort of Kashgar from the Celestials, we are, nevertheless, under the impression that there are no stains of Chinese blood upon his hands. Mr. Shaw informs us at the same time that Sadyk—the famous Kirghiz chief, who caused the Russians so much trouble along their frontier during their operations against Bokhara—was executed by Yakul-Bek, the Atalikh-Ghazi, when the latter advanced on Kashgar, whereas we have had evidence of that man's existence and exploits at various periods subsequent to the fall of the Kashgar citadel.

As for the Atalikh-Yakul-Bek himself, we have it on the authority of the Russians, who have known the man for twenty years and more, that he is a Sadjik, and a native of Audijan. He was a subject of the Khan Hudoyar, of Kokand, in whose service he commanded at Ak-Mesjid, on the Jaxartes, and encountered the Russians in several actions, until he became convinced of the impossibility of checking them. He incurred the displeasure of his youthful master, then only 20 years of age, or quarrelled with him, and took up his abode in Bokhara, where he was ultimately joined by, though not reconciled to, Hudayar-Khan, the latter being dispossessed and driven out of his dominions. Yakul-Bek soon returned again to Kokand with Shah-Murad, the brother of his former master, but later on, fell into disgrace with Alimkul, the brave but ill-fated Regent during the succeeding Kipchok Khan's minority, who was killed at Tashkend in 1865. He now fled a second time, or removed, it is said, to Kashgar, where he gained that popularity and power, by sheer force of intellect and energy, which served in the end to raise him to a throne. We give this as one, and the least known, version of the Alalikh's antecedents, in which there is, at the least, the semblance of quite as much truth as in any other. Apart, however, from the discrepancies to which we have alluded, and for which no blame attaches to the author of the work before us, there is in the pages under review a great fund of varied information in the most attractive form and of pleasing anecdote.
